

BILLINGS PLACE CONDOMINIUM ASSOCIATION, INC.
And
UTE TRAIL TOWNHOMES CONDOMINIUM ASSOCIATION, INC.
Frequently Asked Questions for Unit Owners

Living in Billings Place Condominium Association, Inc. and/or Ute Trail Townhomes Condominium Association, Inc. (“Association”) can and should be a great experience. After all, it’s your home. Unfortunately, this experience can be blemished by not having a basic understanding of the contents of key governing documents under which the Association is required to operate.

The purpose of this Frequently Asked Questions (“FAQ”) is to direct your attention to key provisions of the Bylaws and Declaration of Covenants, Conditions & Restrictions of the Association that are commonly overlooked, misunderstood or simply forgotten. By having a working knowledge of these provisions, you will do your part to make the Association a great place to live and to maintain and enhance property values.

The Bylaws that are referenced in this FAQ were adopted by the Association on January 15, 1995. The Condominium Declaration for Ute Trail Townhomes and Billings Place Condominiums (“Declaration”) was recorded with the Clerk and Recorder of Pitkin County on December 22, 1994 at Reception Number: 377466 in Book 770 at Page 185. Since the Bylaws and Declaration may have been amended since the date this FAQ was drafted, please ask the Board of Directors of the Association whether either of these documents have been amended and review the amendments to determine whether the provisions referenced in the FAQ have changed.

You should also be aware that the Board of Directors has the ability to create reasonable rules and regulations for the Association that are not inconsistent with the Declaration. It is highly recommended that you obtain and review a copy of any rules and regulations in order to comply with them.

Obligation to Pay Assessments

Q: Am I required to pay assessments to the Association?

A: Yes. The Declaration at Section 6.1 requires every owner of a unit in the Association to pay assessments. The assessment provisions in Article VI of the Declaration also outline the purpose of the assessments and the steps the Association may take to collect delinquent assessments.

Assessments, also commonly referred to as dues, are essential to the operation of the Association. If owners are not diligent about paying their assessments in a timely manner, the Board of Directors may not have the funds necessary to carry out their responsibility to provide essential services to owners and to maintain and operate the Association.

Tips Regarding Assessments:

- If you do not believe you have received notice from the Association on when your assessments are due, the amount of the assessments, and the method you should utilize to pay them – don’t wait for your Association to provide you with this information. Instead, be proactive in obtaining this information so you will not run the risk of becoming delinquent. Failure to receive this information from the Association does not extinguish your obligation under the Declaration to pay assessments.

- If you experience a major life event (e.g. loss of a job, catastrophic illness, etc.) that makes it difficult for you to pay your assessments in full or in a timely manner – share this information with the Board of Directors as quickly as possible. Have a dialogue with your Board about making alternate payment arrangements until you are on your feet again.

- It is important to understand that it is the fiduciary duty of the Board of Directors of the Association to collect assessments. Any legal steps the Board takes to collect delinquent assessments consistent with Declaration or Colorado law, are not intended to be a personal attack. Instead, the Board is fulfilling its legal duty to the Association. You should also be aware that if the Board is forced to take legal action to collect assessments, the delinquent homeowner will ultimately be required to pay the Association's legal fees.

- You should be aware that the Aspen Pitkin County Housing Authority may also be empowered to take action against owners who do not pay their assessments. To learn more about the authority of APCHA relating to assessment delinquencies, please call 970-920-5050 or visit the following website: <http://www.aspenhousingoffice.com/>.

Insurance Obligations of the Association and Unit Owner

Q: Is the Association required to insure any portion of my unit?

A: The Declaration outlines the responsibilities of the Association and owners to insure portions of individual units and any common areas of the Association. If the Declaration does not specifically outline the responsibility of the Association to insure any portion of your unit, you can safely assume the insurance responsibility for the unit rests with you. You should carefully review the following provisions of the Declaration to determine the insurance responsibilities of the Association and unit owners: Article VIII.

Tips Regarding Insurance:

- Under no circumstances is the Association required to insure the contents of your home. As a result, in addition to any other insurance coverage you are required to maintain under the Declaration or your mortgage, make sure you carry an HO-6 policy that includes the following four basic coverages: unit coverage, personal property coverage, liability coverage and loss assessment.

- If you are unsure – or if the Declaration is unclear – about the insurance coverage homeowners are required to maintain, it's smart to work with an insurance professional to ensure you are carrying adequate coverage. It's not the responsibility of the Association to ensure that owners carry appropriate insurance coverage.

Maintenance Obligations of the Association and Unit Owner

Q: Is the Association required to maintain any portion of my unit?

A: The Declaration outlines the responsibilities of the Association and owners to maintain portions of individual units and any common areas of the Association. If the Declaration does not specifically outline the responsibility of the Association to maintain any portion of your unit, you can safely assume the maintenance responsibility for the unit rests with you. You should carefully review the following provisions of the Declaration to determine the maintenance responsibilities of the Association and unit owners: Sections 3.7 (Easement in Unit for Repair, Maintenance and Emergencies), 4.3 (Units, Common Elements and Utilities), 4.10 (Maintenance and Upkeep), and 7.5 (Maintenance of Units and Limited Common Elements).

In particular, Article IV, Section 4.3 provides that the Associations have the following responsibilities: “Each Association shall be obligated to and shall provide for the care, operation, management, maintenance, improvement, repair and replacement of the General Common Elements, and for utility service to the Common Elements. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, such obligation shall include keeping the General Common Elements in good, clean, attractive and sanitary condition, order and repair, and removing snow and other materials from the General Common Elements to permit access to the Project, the Units and Limited Common Elements of any Condominium Unit; keeping the entire Project safe and attractive; and paying utility charges, except any separately metered utilities, which shall be paid by the Owner or user of the space served thereby . . .”

Article IV, Section 4.10 further provides in part: “Each Association . . . shall be responsible for maintaining and shall maintain that portion of the Real Property for which it is given management authority and responsibility in absolutely a clean, safe and attractive condition, shall regularly treat all exterior surfaces of building improvements with paint, stain or oil, as applicable, shall keep and maintain all infrastructure systems (utilities and equipment) in good operating condition and repair, shall maintain all landscaping in a healthy and flourishing state, and shall maintain all walks and common areas, snow, ice and debris free and in a clear, safe and attractive condition. . .”

Note: The specific items outlined may not include all of the maintenance requirements for the Association. Further, these requirements may change by amendment of the Declaration. You should carefully review the Declaration and amendments to determine the full maintenance, repair and replacement responsibilities of the Association and owners.

Tips Regarding Maintenance:

- It is essential to comply with any maintenance obligations required by the Declaration. Failure to comply with these maintenance obligations constitutes a covenant violation which may result in you being subjected to a fine by the Association.

- By fulfilling your maintenance obligations, you are doing your part to ensure the property values of the Association are maintained and even enhanced.

Use of Common Areas

Q: Is it true that in some cases only designated homeowners are able to use specified portions of the common areas?

A: Sometimes. The declaration of an association will describe what areas are common areas (sometimes referred to as common elements) which are generally designated for use by all of the residents of the association. In some cases, a declaration will define certain property as “limited common area” or “limited common element” which can be utilized only by specified individuals. For instance in a condominium association, a balcony may be defined as limited common area which is for the exclusive use of the residents of that particular condominium unit.

To determine what is defined as common area or limited common area in your Association, please review the following provisions of the Declaration:

Common Area: Section 1.6 (Common Elements) and 1.11 (General Common Elements). Generally, the Common Elements are all portions of the community other than the Units.

Limited Common Area: Section 1.12 (Limited Common Elements). Limited Common Elements generally consist of those portions of the Common Elements designated for the exclusive use of Owners of particular Units, including but not limited to: (i) pipes, ducts, electrical wiring, conduits, flues, and built-in fireplaces (if any) located entirely within a Unit or adjoining Unit and serving only such Unit or Units; (ii) the heating systems serving exclusively any Unit or Units; (iii) such portions of the perimeter walls, floors, ceilings, doors, windows and all associate fixtures and structures intended to be physically located within the Unit, as may lie outside the Unit boundaries; (iv) any other features of the Project identified on the Map with the legend "L.C.E." and a designation of the Unit to which such Limited Common Element is appurtenant; (v) any balcony, porch, storage room, patio or parking area that is accessible from, associated with and/or which adjoins a Unit, as may be designated, located, or shown on the Condominium Map by legend, symbol or word, and shall, without further reference thereto, be used in connection with such Unit to the exclusion of the use thereof by the other owners of the Condominium Units except by invitation.

Tips Regarding Use of Common Area:

- Since common area is for the use of all of the residents of the Association, do not place anything permanently or semi-permanently on the common area without first obtaining permission from the Board of Directors.

- Check with the Board of Directors to find out whether – in addition to the use restrictions in the Declaration – there are any rules or regulations addressing the use of the common areas.

- If you have exclusive use of a limited common area, review the Declaration for any guidelines that may regulate your use.

Use Restrictions

Q: Are there any use restrictions that I need to be aware of?

A: Yes. The Association you live in is a covenant-controlled community. That means there are some activities that are regulated by the Association. Activities commonly regulated by associations pertain to pets, parking, and landscaping – to name a few.

The Declaration outlines the use restrictions of this Association at Article VII. Here is list of all of the items addressed in the use restriction section of the Declaration:

1. Common Elements Use – Conversion of Limited Common Elements.
2. Common Elements Restrictions.
3. No Imperiling of Insurance.
4. No Violation of Law.
5. Maintenance of Units and Limited Common Elements.
6. No Violation of Rules.
7. Owner Caused Damage.
8. No Impairment of Structural Integrity.
9. Animal Restrictions.
10. Authority of Board of Managers.
11. Garages.
12. Planned Unit Development and Subdivision Agreement.

Tips Regarding Use Restrictions:

- If you are unsure whether an action you are planning to take may violate a use restriction, contact the Board of Directors for guidance prior to acting.

- Violation of a use restriction may ultimately subject you to a fine from the Association.

- In addition to the use restrictions in the Declaration, contact the Board of Directors to determine whether there are any other rules or regulations you should be aware of.

Reserve Account Requirements

Q: Is my Association required to have a reserve account?

A: The declarations of many associations require the board of the association to create and contribute funds to a reserve account. As a general rule, reserve accounts are created for the purpose of saving the funds necessary to be utilized at a later date for the repair and replacement of physical assets of the association. For instance, an association may make contributions to a reserve account for the purpose of replacing asphalt on a periodic basis. The physical assets that an association is responsible for repairing or replacing are typically outlined in the declaration of each association.

The issue of reserves is addressed in the Declaration of this Association at Section 6.2.

Board Authority

Q: What authority does the Board of Directors of this Association have?

A: In addition to the authority granted to the boards of associations under Colorado law, the powers of boards are typically found in the bylaws. As a general rule, association boards are granted the broad authority to carry out the operations and management of the association they serve. The authority of the Board of Directors of this Association is found in the Bylaws at Sections 4.9 and 4.10.

This FAQ is intended to provide you with a broad overview of just a few of the items in the Declaration and Bylaws that you should be familiar with. It is highly recommended that you review the Declaration and Bylaws to gain a more comprehensive view of the governance and operations of the Association and how this affects you – an owner of a unit in the Association.
